COOPER TO SPEAK ON WILSON ARTICLE

"THE ROAD AWAY FROM REVOLUTION" IS HIS SUBJECT

IS MUCH DISCUSSED

Magazine Article by Former President Has Created New Furor in Thoughts of People

The Rev. J. A. Cooper, pastor of the Baptist Church here, will speak on "The Road Away From Revolution" at the evening service at that church tomorrow night. The sermon is based on an article in the Atlantic Monthly for August. The article is written by former President Wilson and is called, "The Road Away From Revolution."

Regarding his sermon tomorrow night, the Rev. Mr. Cooper said this morning:

"Seldom has there appeared in current literature an article which has aroused so much discussion as that of Ex-President Wilson's in The Atlantic Monthly for August, which he called "The Road Away From Revolution."

"Of course, everything which Mr. Wilson writes is of interest not merely to the American people over whom he has lately presided as President but to that larger group of world citizens who came to regard him in the closing days of the World War, and the early days of peace as the foremost exponent of certain new ideals in international relationships. In large part even those who have disagreed with Mr. Wilson in his suggestions as to plans have sympathized with him in his ideals, and there has been almost universal recognition of his gifts.

Among these gifts none has attracted more attention than his ability to express himself with clearness, force, and beauty, and the article or essay to which reference has been made above is no exception. To the literary qualities referred to above he has added here, as often, that of brevity, the writing taking up only two pages in the magazine. At first thought this seems most surprising, especially as he sets out to find "some real ground for the universal unrest and perturbation" and to point out a task "which is nothing less than the salvation of civilization." But the reason for the brevity of the article is found at least in part in the nature of the remedy proposed for the ills of the world; it needs only be said, as in his own words, that "our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually."

In our service last Sunday evening we discussed President Coolidge's first address as Chief Executive, his speech before the Red Cross Convention on "Practical Idealism" commenting upon the religious tone of this initial formal public utterance, of the new President. In our service tomorrow evening we shall have for discussion the article of Mr. Wilson's referred to above. It has been said that the essay indicates that the former President has lost faith in the League, of which he was the foremost champion, and that he has changed his mind about international relationships and their problems. Be that as it may, there can be no doubt that he is here calling attention to the most serious situation of modern life, and it is that situation about which we expect to speak tomorrow evening."

Mrs. A. W. Galloway of Beaumont, Texas, arrived here last night for a visit with her sister, Mrs. George E. Brown, residing west of Maryville.

CHURCH MEMBERS MUST AID MEETING

SAYS REV. O. E. HAMILTON AT TABERNACLE LAST NIGHT

PERSONAL WORK NEEDED

Skidmore, Salem, Bethany, Graham and Palestine Had Delegations at Meeting Last Night

Skidmore, Salem, Bethany, Graham and Palestine communities observed their special delegation night at the tabernacle meetings last night with good delegations. A much larger attendance of the local Maryville people brought the audience to the usual size, though there were no special school groups from the County present.

What was thought to be the most forceful sermon of the whole series thus far was preached by Rev. O. E. Hamilton. It was directed to church members and was a direct appeal to them to get behind this great campaign, which is the greatest of its kind ever launched by any people in the country. Those who are merely formal, conventional church members, and who do not possess a deep passion for souls that will drive them heroic sacrifices for the campaign were bitterly rebuked by the evangelist.

"Are you standing on the edge of the Kingdom or are you all the way in" was the challenge directed to all members present. "Eight of the disciples were left on the edge of the Garden while only three went inside. There are too many church members satisfied to hang on the edge of the Kingdom."

"Some church members sit down and sit there, others get up and get there. Are you a 'setter' or a getter? You say you don't believe in in personal work. Neither does the devil. Of course if your heart is not right you won't believe in personal work."

At the close of the sermon last night, a great consecration service was held. Hundreds of church people went forward and shook the hands of the pastors of the County, as a public demonstration of their loyalty to the work in this campaign with the prayer in their hearts that the Lord may have His way with them during these days. It is thought that never before in the history of Maryville revivals has there been such a demonstration as this one held in the service last night.

Tonight's service will begin at 7:15, fifteen minutes earlier than usual, owing to the showing of a moving picture by John Fisher Anderson on his travels through Hawaii. He explains his pictures as they are shown and a great deal of interest is shown in them. All who expect to attend this service are asked to be present promptly at 7:15.

Great preparations are being made for the services tomorrow. Eight hundred is the goal for the Bible school. All classes will be held in their usual places after which a parade will be formed to the tabernacle for the morning preaching service. The first public invitations will be extended in tomorrow services.

An overflow service tomorrow night has been arranged at the Electric Theatre. As soon as the tabernacle is filled the service will begin and others will be ushered to the theater where a great service of song and sermon will be held. So no-one should stay at home fearing they cannot get into the service. In this way about 3,000 people can be accommodated.

M'BEE SAYS WORK HAS JUST STARTED

LEGISLATURE WILL NOW INVESTIGATE KU KLUX KLAN

IT WILL BE UNMASKED

This Much Has Been Agreed to by Members of Oklahoma Assembly —Investigation Begins

Oklahoma City, Oct. 27.—"We have impeached Jack Walton, 'the king,' and our work has only just begun."

This was the statement of W. D. McBee of the Oklahoma House of Representatives who said that the next job would be to investigate the Ku Klux Klan and various departments of the state government.

This investigation and other legislation will go on while the Senate tries Walton, McBee said.

The Klan will at least be unmasked in Oklahoma, a majority of the House members agree. Three members of the House and three members of the Senate have been appointed to investigate all charges against the Klan, and they already have gone to work.

Other investigating committees are calling witnesses today to further go into the affairs of state. One hundred and five subpoenas were issued last night and early today, which included the investigation of the state department of agriculture, the health department, House of Representatives membership and the board of affairs.

Nutrition Work by Red Cross in Schools

The Red Cross Nutrition work has been conducted in the schools the past week in Maryville, Elmo, Burlington Junction, Hopkins, Skidmore, and Graham

Lessons have been on Air. Methods of ventilation were discussed. Correct posture as related to getting the required amount of fresh air was taught. Twelve Hundred school children are reached each week by these lessons.

Lesson in food selection given for adults was on fruits and vegetables. Vegetables are not luxuries, but necessities. They are a valuable source of lime, phosphorous, and iron the three minerals especially important in the family dietary. Fresh fruits and vegetables are our most valuable source of the vitanines.

At least one and one-fourth pounds of fresh vegetables and fruits should be provided daily in the food of each individual. As much as four pounds may be used in a day. Since dried vegetables and fruits weigh on the average about one-sixth as much as they do fresh, their dried weight should be multiplied by six to obtain their fresh weight.

Many mineral salts are lost in cooking. Steaming and baking are ideal methods of preparation. When boiling vegetables use the stock in other cooking as potato water in gravy or in soup. When cooking vegetables always have water boiling as cold water extracts nutritive factors.

Farm Bureau Films Shown at Rockford

Farmers in That Community Will Organize to Fight Destructive Chinch Bugs—Leaders Selected

R. A. Kinnaird exhibited the farm bureau films at Rockford, seven miles southwest of Maryville, last night. A large crowd saw the presentation of the Chinch Bug film and the motion pictures of the Boys' and Girls' Baby Beef Show held in St. Joseph recently.

The farmers in the Rockford district organized last night to fight the chinch bugs. They will burn the brush and grass along the fence rows and the other dead grass and underbrush where the chinch bugs congregate. Mr. Kinnaird says that this will destroy the chinch bugs and will greatly reduce the loss from this deadly insect next year.

Ernest Bainum and W. C. Hogan will have charge of this work in the Rockford district.

Mr. Kinnaird announced this morning that he will exhibit these farm bureau films at the following places:

Tuesday night — Parent-Teachers meeting in Graham.

THOUSANDS HONOR MEMORY OF "T. R."

BIRTHPLACE OF LATE PRESIDENT IS VISITED TODAY

COOLIDGE IN EULOGY

Says Roosevelt Saved America From "Cleavage of Class"—Is Compared with Lincoln and Washington

New York, Oct. 27—While the nation and world today paid homage to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt, special honors were his here in the city of his birth.

The modest brick house on East Twentieth street, where the great President was born sixty-five years ago, today was formerly dedicated by the Women's Roosevelt Memorial Association, which restored it and filled it with relics of the lovable "T. R."

There came to do him homage some whom he favored most in life. There was Gilford Pinchot, Governor of Pennsylvania, James R. Garfield, his Secretary of the Interior, Elihu Root, Bishop William T. Manning and scores of others. Messages from President Coolidge and Major-General Leonard Wood were read at the dedication services.

New York, Oct. 27.—In the modest little house on East Twentieth street where Theodore Roosevelt was born sixty-five years ago, a message of praise of the former President from President Calvin Coolidge was received today.

"Fourteen years ago," he wrote, "standing also at a birthplace which has also become a national shrine, Theodore Roosevelt said of Washington and Lincoln, 'There have been other men as great and other men as good, but in all the history of mankind, there are no other two good men as great.'

"Among the good who also were great, among the great who were also good, we may now inscribe the name of a third.

"Roosevelt, like Lincoln, was in a true sense the preserver of our national unity. Lincoln saved us from sectional cleavage; Roosevelt saved us from class cleavage."

WANTS U. S. TO AID NATIONS OF EUROPE

FRENCH NOTE SAYS AMERICA SHOULD AID IN SETTLEMENT.

DEADLOCK DUE TO END

American Officials are Optimistic Over Situation, But Proposal Is Not Entirely Satisfactory.

London, Oct. 27.—France's reply to the British proposal for an international reparations conference, received at the foreign office today, was more than half devoted to an exposition of the value of establishing co-operation of the United States in European affairs.

The note does not contain any restrictions beyond the declaration made yesterday by the French foreign office that the proposed conference of international experts, in their discussion of German's capacity for indemnity payment, must not exceed the provisions of the Versailles treaty.

Washington, Oct. 27.—For the first time since France entered the Ruhr, there appeared general confidence among American officials that the reparations deadlock is due to end soon. France's conditional acceptance of the plan put forward by Hughes is not entirely satisfactory to officials of this government. They would have preferred that the Frenfch accept the Hughes plan outright. Nevertheless, they feel that a half loaf is better than none at all.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NODAWAY COUNTY

STUDENTS AND THE BUBBLE WAGON

The problem of the automobile in college life is not confined to schools hereabouts. The president of the University of Missouri is canvassing parents of students with a request that they take home the automobile which their sons and daughters have brought to school. Investigation of scholastic failures in recent years leads him to the conclusion that the promiscuous use of cars is a contributory factor in almost all cases.

Coincidentally, authorities at Miami university, Oxford, O., have decided to restrict the use of automobiles to students who live in the country outside of town and who find machines necessary in coming and going from Oxford. It becomes apparent that the problem is one which besets college authorities everywhere.

There is no record of any college students ever having been helped in studies by possession of a car. It is plain its tendency is not only conducive but entirely detrimental to a studious mind. There is no necessity for owning a car in most college towns; there is a reason why a prohibition of their use should be laid down generally.

If a football or baseball candidate is not proficient in studies he is forthwith declared ineligible to continue his activities and thought to the work for which he was ostensibly sent to college. Is there any particular reason why an automobile, from which a student naturally derives less benefit than he would from participation in sport, should not similarly be forbidden as detrimental to his education? The thoughtful parent realizes that an education successfully acquired is a most valuable possession. — Detroit News.

The problem of the economical home is about to be solved. A low priced auto has been perfected that may be turend into a bedroom at night and a living room in day time. All that seems to be needed now is an oil stove, a few groceries, and a marriage license.

There has been general complaint in recent years about the assumption of constantly increasing powers by the federal government. The best way to avoid this is for the states to assume such responsibilities as belong to them. Shifting responsibilities that belong to the states to the shoulders of the federal government is not the way to prevent the centralization of power in Washington.

It costs the average business man more to keep his books and make out his reports to suit the income tax officials for the state and federal governments than it does to pay the tax. Then there are the corporation reports, the insurance reports, the factory reports the postoffice reports, and numerous other reports that keep a competent man busy most of his time in every business.

Here's a friendly tip to the bootlegger and hootchmaker. The new state law is strange enough and tight enough to put every one of you in the penitentiary if a reasonable amount of evidence can be gotten and fairly presented to a jury of law abiding citizens. Every officer of the law is sworn to do his duty and enforce the law and sooner or later they will get you. Now, wouldn't it be better to quit such dangerous business and be on the safe side?

Wolfe, State Champion to Meet Jack Maloney

Telegram Confirms Wolfe as State Champion of Middleweights—Maloney Is High Class.

Maryville wrestling fans will be treated to a championship match when Billy Wolfe, recognized champion of the middleweight realm of Missouri, and Jack Maloney of Texas, meet in a finish match at the College Monday night. Followers of the game in Maryville have witnessed the fast and scientific Wolfe show his wares when pitted against Barackman several months ago and know that he is a capable wrestler who meets the man at his own game while on the mat.

The match is promoted by the American Legion and is of such high class that it is causing comment all over the state.

Wolfe is the recognized middleweight champion of Missouri, according to a telegram received this morning from the editor of the Wrestling News, Kansas City. Maloney has cleaned up on the middleweight in the state of Texas and is out for new worlds to conquer, and Maryville fans are to have a chance to witness these two idols of the mat clash in a finish match.

Doc Reid of the Wrestling News, the official organ of the mat game in the state has the following to say concerning the match which is scheduled to take place in Maryville Monday night:

That Wolf is not seeking setups or sorting them over in the hope of uncovering a soft one, is evident by his ready acceptance of a mat battle with Jack Maloney the Texas whirlwind, who, having disposed of all formidable opposition in his own bailiwick, has invaded Missouri with the apparent intention of acquiring more honors. The latter is known to be one of the toughest of the present crop of middleweights and should give the Missouri title holder a rough voyage.

Dr. D. J. Thomas will officiate the match. The men weight 158 lbs each.

FINE EXHIBITS AT RURAL SCHOOL FAIR

MARTHA WASHINGTON EVENT IS WELL GIVEN YESTERDAY.

MERCHANTS GIVE PRIZES

School District Appreciates Aid of Maryville Merchants and Chamber of Commerce—Winners.

"An unusual fine exhibit for a small school district," said L. H. Brownfield, secretary of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce, in speaking of the Martha Washington School Fair which was held yesterday. The teacher, Miss Maye Sturm, deserves a great deal of credit for the manner in which the fair was conducted and for the entertainment which took place. The Martha Washington School, which is about three miles southeast of Maryville is the first school in the state to be put on the approved list by the state educational department.

A basket dinner was served at noon on the school grounds, all the farmers in the district bringing their dinners and the town people were invited to participate. It was the opinion of all the persons from Maryville who ate there yesterday that the dinner served by the farmers of the Martha Washington School was excellent.

Agriculture exhibits of every description were to be found under the canvas tent on the school grounds and there were exhibits of dairy cows, beef cattle, draft horses, mules, Shetland ponies, different breeds of hogs, chickens and geese. The show was judged by R. A. Kinnaird, county farm bureau agent; G. K. Arney, vocational agricultural instructor at Maryville High School; W. W. Stanfield, of the State Teachers College, L. H. Brownfield, secretary of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce; and Miss Hettie Anthony of the State Teachers College.

The judging was done between 11:30 and 2:30 o'clock. Premiums offered at the fair were given by all of the Maryville merchants and the prize money was taken from a fund that was made at a box supper held recently at the school and from the premium of $75 awarded the Martha Washington School at Agriculture Day of the Fall Fiesta and Exposition. L. H. Brownfield awarded the prizes. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon all that could, crowded into the school house, where short talks were given by W. W. Stanfield, G. K. Arney, Dr. C. P. Fryer and L. H. Brownfield.

The directors of the Martha Washington School through Roy Lippman, sent word to the merchants of Maryville and the Chamber of Commerce that the farmers of that school district would be glad to co-operate with them in any way whatsovere, and appreciated very much the premiums that the merchants had given at the fair.

AT REST

Died Tuesday noon, October 23, 1923, at her home southwest of Maryville. Addie, beloved wife of Hugh Dempsey. Deceased was born in Adams county, Illinois, July 20, 1869. In 1878 she came with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Renshaw, to Nodaway County, Missouri, where she had lived since. Addie became a member of the Christian Church in her early girlhood days. She was married to Mr. Hugh Dempsey Feb., 12, 1891. To this union five children were born, two of whom, Helen and Vern, are left to carry on the good work instilled in their lives by their mother. One child died in infancy, Mildred at the age of one year and eleven months, and Earl at the age of 25. The deceased leaves her husband, two brothers and three sisters to mourn her absence. But they mourn not as those who have no hope. Addie was a true and devoted wife, an affectionate mother and with all a Christian woman. Religion with her was a reality and not a bubble. None knew her but to love her, as was voiced by the long and solemn cortege that mournfully followed her pale face and pulseless for mto its last resting place.

The funeral services were conducted at the family residence Thursday afternoon, October 25, by Rev. R. E. Snodgrass.

Maxi-Cushion

Bridges the Gap Between Solid and Pneumatic

A practical tire of scientific design, combining the buoyant cushioning qualities of a pneumatic with the long, trouble-free mileage of a solid.

Because of its unusual construction the Firestone Maxi-Cushion closely approaches the ideal tire for most light and medium duty service. The depression pockets at the sides permit resilience almost equal to a pneumatic, while the solid, all-rubber construction eliminates the weakness of internal cavities and results in a tire of exceptional wear-resisting qualities.

We have a complete stock of these tires in all sizes, as well as three other types that Firestone builds. And we are ready at all times to make quick changes or give any truck tire service you may require. Let us show you how these tires and our service will put your trucking on the most profitable basis.

FORTUNES IN WRITING SONGS

All That Is Needed Is to Catch the Popular Fancy, and Wealth Comes.

The announcement that F. E. Weatherly, the barrister who took to song writing, is still hale and hearty at seventy-five, and is shortly to be married, adds a new chapter to the romance of song-making.

Mr. Weatherly, many of whose songs were set to music by Michael Maybrick, better known as "Stephen Adams," has written some of the world's most popular songs, among them "Nancy Lee," "They All Love Jack," "Nirvana," and "The Holy City."

Song writing means moneymaking if once the popular taste can be caught, says London Tit-Bits. Irving Berlin has made, we are told, more than £20,000 out of "When I Lost You," "That's How I Need You" and "When I Leave the World," and is believed to be still making anything from £10,000 to £14,000 in royalties every year.

A single song, "Oh, Marguerite," brought Osmond Carr £28,000, and the author and composer of "Her Golden Hair Was Hanging Down Her Back" netted £20,000, while "The Bogey Man" earned over £10,000.

In a wholly different category come such popular favorites as "A Perfect Day" and "The Lost Chord," yet Miss Carrie Jacob-Bond's publishers have sold more than 4,500,000 copies of the former, and Sir Arthur Sullivan received £10,000 in royalties on the latter before he died, and it is still earning money.

Samuel Lucas was paid £16,000 in royalties on "My Grandfather's Clock," 3,000,000 copies were sold in a few years of Miss Meta Orred's "In the Gloaming," and more than twice that number is recorded in respect of Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Song of the Republic," with its noble opening.

COTTON MILLS GAIN IN ASIA

They Are Multiplying Rapidly, but the Mortality of Mill Workers in Japan Is High.

The people of densely populated Asia are clothed in cotton, says the Living Age. That continent produces large quantities of this useful staple. Asiatics are fairly competent and remarkably cheap mill operatives. Naturally, therefore, cotton mills are multiplying rapidly in Japan, China and India, where they create new social problems almost as quickly as they supply the local market with yarns and fabrics.

The industry already gives employment to more than 100,000 operatives in China, and more than 230,000 operatives in Japan. Four-fifths of the workers in Japanese mills are women or girls; but in China and India male labor is principally employed. It has long been known that the mortality among Japanese spinners, especially from tuberculosis, is very high. Their hours of labor are long, and the annual turnover approaches 100 per cent.

Chinese in Canada.

Calculations put the number of Chinese in Canada today at 58,000, against 14,000 twenty years ago. These figures have been responsible for the Stewart bill, aiming at the abrogation of the $500 Chinese head tax and the admission into Canada of students and merchants under restricted conditions. In Vancouver alone (according to the London Times) there are 40 Chinese butchers, 65 barbers, 172 grocers, 80 jewelers, 201 tobacconists, 29 wholesale dealers, 159 hawkers and peddlers, 50 boot and shoe dealers, 5 publishers, 54 stationers, and they control 144 confectionery shops, 63 clothing stores, 30 express and dray businesses and 89 restaurants.

Why Not?

"Now, boys," said the schoolmaster to the geography class, "I want you to bear in mind that the affix 'stan' means 'the place of.' Thus we have Afghanistan, the place of Afghans—also Hindustan, the place of Hindus. Can any one give another example?"

Nobody appeared very anxious to do so until little Johnny Snaggs, the joy of his mother and the terror of cats, said proudly, "Yes, sir, I can. Umbrellastan, the place for Umbrellas."

Now You Can Shave in the Dark.

Designed especially for use by traveling men, a self-illuminating safety razor makes it possible to shave in the dark. In the handle of the razor is a tiny electric bulb, encased in a rubber holder which prevents dampness from rusting it. The lamp is adjusted so that it always throws its light on the spot where the razor is cutting. A clean shave in pitch darkness is said to be possible with this device.

Alcohol Street Lamps.

Buenos Aires, rapidly becoming up to date, still has grain alcohol lamps to light her streets, although kerosene and alcohol street lamps are being gradually superseded by electricity. More than a thousand alcohol lamps were installed during 1922. There are at present 3,273 alcohol street lamps in use in the city.

Women's Inventions.

Women in the past ten years have invented some 1,400 different "new and useful articles," according to a report by the United States patent office, ranging from a rotary plowshare to an egg beater. Among inventions enumerated are a cow tail holder, a reinforced bowl in which to beat eggs, and an artificial eyelash.

co-operate and become leaders.

The Myrtle Tree Farm Club string band next furnished a couple of selections which was followed by the address of Milo Reno of Des Moines, Ia., president of the Farmers Union of that state.

Mr. Reno said that he held the farmers responsible for the present economic conditions of affairs, and that it had been the duty of the agricultural class to iron out and come to the rescue of every crisis since the beginning of history. Mr. Reno said that the farmers themselves, and they only, could remedy the present conditions that the farmers of today face, that of having to take the prices that are fixed for the mby other persons, and that remedy is organization.

It is the problem for the farmer to solve himself and the farmer cannot shift the responsibility on the shoulders of somebody else.

George M. Kelley, vice-president of the M. F. A. of Missouri, was the last speaker of the program.

The prizes were then awarded after Mr. Kelley's address by L. H. Brownfield, which ended a successful day for the Farm Clubs and Farmers Union in Nodaway County.

Resolution.

The following resolution was passed by the convention at the end of the meeting:

Whereas, the Chamber of Commerce, the merchants, the business men and the citizens of Maryville, have seen fit to extend to us, the members of the Missouri Farmers Association, financial assistance and hearty co-operation in holding this our first picnic in Nodaway County,

Be it, resolved, That we, the members of the M. F. A., extend to them our heartfelt thanks for such aid and co-operation.

"Human Wreckage" Is A Colossal Picture

Fight Against Drug Habit Leads to Writing of Play by Widow Wallace Reid

Every right thinking individual in the United States is aroused over the revelation of the dope menace that exists at the present time and many efforts are being put forth in an attempt to stop the curse. Nothing can bring home the facts as they exist better than can the sight of the actions itself and this is what is shown in "The Human Wreckage" starring Mrs. Wallace Reid which is to be shown at the Electric Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday of next week.

The picture has been released but for a short time and has had extensive runs in all of the large city theaters where thousands of people have stormed the door for admittance.

It is a fact that never before in the history of the movies has a picture received such a colossal amount of publicity as has "The Human Wreckage." Statesmen, governors, Red Cross societies and all of the Woman's Federated Club organizations have pledged there support to the attack after having seen the picture.

The picture gives a stirring appeal for the old fashion mother which Mrs. Reid declares is the only thing that will save the future generations.

William Anderson, late of this place has bought property and is erecting a fine residence in Graham.

On last Monday evening, a very pleasant party came off at the residence of W. W. Dougherty, Esq. near Hickory Grove in this county. Quite a number of ladies and gentlemen from Maryville were in attendance and came home with the recollections of a most happy occasional, after keeping up the dance to a late hour.

We learn that a vein of coal was struck last week by parties sinking a well on a schoolhouse lot, about two miles from Amazonia. The shaft was sunk on a hill and was about seventy feet deep. Our informant stated that the coal had every appearance of being of good quality and valuable.

Something got wrong with the gas machine, and they went down to investigate, taking with them a lighted lantern. As soon as they opened the gas receptacle a flash followed. Both were burned about the face and arms.

The BROWN MOUSE

COPYRIGHT BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

CHAPTER VIII.—Jim has Christmas dinner at Colonel Woodruff's, and listening to him, Jennie begins to do some thinking concerning his ability and his prospects.

CHAPTER IX.—In the evening Jim, as well as he knows how, courts Jennie, without, however, making much progress, though she is quickly losing her poor opinion of him.

CHAPTER X.—Jennie, elected county superintendent of schools, receives so many complaints from people of the district concerning Jim's methods of teaching that she finds herself compelled formally to ask for his resignation. After she has left, Jim is visited by Colonel Woodruff, who strongly urges him to refuse to resign, and offers to back him. Jim agrees to stick, for a while at least.

CHAPTER XI.—A meeting of the school board, which had been gathered to "get" Jim, is confronted by Jennie, who upholds him. He conducts an examination of his pupils at the meeting, to prove that he is not neglecting their "book learning" by the introduction of other subjects which he considers of importance. The splendid showing made by the children converts many, who had doubted, to his views.

CHAPTER XII.—The novel ideas which Jim has introduced have been talked about outside the county, and he is visited by Professor Withers, extension lecturer at the state university, who invites him to deliver an address at the next annual meeting of the Farmers' institute.

CHAPTER XIII.—Professor Withers is impressed by many of the innovations made by Irwin, and so informs Colonel Woodruff and Jennie, somewhat to the astonishment of both. The colonel suggests to Jim that he (the colonel) seek election to the school board, replacing Cornelius Bonner, implacable enemy of Jim Irwin.

CHAPTER XIV.—Feigning sickness, Newton Bronson, youngster whom Irwin has redeemed from idleness and folly and set on the right path, and who almost worships the teacher, keeps his father from voting at the school board election. Bronson is a friend of Bonner, and would have voted for him. As it is, Colonel Woodruff is chosen for the position, owing to Bronson's absence.

CHAPTER XV

The Glorious Fourth.

A good deal of water run under the Woodruff district bridges in the weeks between the school election and the Fourth of July picnic at Eight-Mile grove. But few surface indications there were of any change in the little community in this annual gathering of friends and neighbors. Wilbur Smythe made the annual address, and was in rather finer fettle than usual as he paid his fervid tribute to the starry flag, and to this very place as the most favored spot in the best county of the greatest state in the most powerful, intellectual, freest and most progressive nation in the best possible of worlds.

Jim Irwin read the Declaration rather well, Jennie Woodruff thought, as she sat on the platform between Deacon Avery, the eldest settler in the district, and Mrs. Columbus Brown, the sole local representative of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Colonel Woodruff presided in his Grand Army of the Republic uniform.

The fresh northwest breeze made free with the oaks, elms, hickories and box elders of Eight-Mile grove, and the waters of Pickerel creek glimmered a hundred yards away, beyond the flitting figures of the boys who preferred to shoot off their own firecrackers and torpedoes and nigger-chasers, rather than to listen to those of Wilbur Smythe. Still farther off could be heard the voice of a lone lemonade vender as he advertised ice-cold lemonade, made in the shade, with a brand-new spade, by an old maid, as a guaranty that it was the blamedest, coldest lemonade ever sold.

Under the shadiest trees a few incorrigible Marthas were spreading the snowy table-cloths on which would soon be placed the bountiful repasts stored in ponderous wicker baskets and hampers. It was a lovely day, in a lovely spot—a good example of the miniature forests which grew naturally from time immemorial in favored locations on the Iowa prairies—half a square mile of woodland, all about which the green corn rows stood asiant in the cool breeze, waist-high and laid by."

They were passing down the rough board steps from the platform after the exercises had terminated in a rousing rendition of "America," when Jennie Woodruff, having slipped by everybody else to reach him, tapped Jim Irwin on the arm. He looked back at her over his shoulder with his slow gentle smile.

"Isn't your mother here, Jim?" she asked. "I've been looking all over the crowd and can't see her."

"She isn't here," answered Jim. "I was in hopes that when she broke loose and went to your Christmas dinner she would stay loose—but she went home and settled back into her rut."

"Too bad," said Jennie. "She'd have had a nice time if she had come."

"Yes," said Jim, "I believe she would."

"I want help," said Jennie. "Our hamper is terribly heavy. Please."

It was rather obvious to Mrs. Bonner that Jennie was throwing herself at Jim's head, but that was an article of the Bonner family creed since the decision which closed the hearing at the court house. It must be admitted that the young county superintendent found tasks which kept the schoolmaster very close to her side.

"Sit down, Jim," said Mrs. Woodruff, "you've earned a bite of what we've got. It's good enough, what there is of it, and there's enough of it, such as it is!"

"I'm sorry," said Jim, "but I've a prior engagement."

"Why, Jim!" protested Jennie. "I've been counting on you. Don't desert me!"

"I'm awfully sorry," said Jim, "but I promised. I'll see you later."

One might have thought, judging by the colonel's quizzical smile, that he was pleased at Jennie's loss of her former swain.

"We'll have to invite him longer ahead of time," said he. "He's getting to be in demand."

Jim seemed to be in demand—a fact that Jennie confirmed by observation. He received a dozen invitations as he passed the groups seated on the grass—one of them from Mrs. Cornelius Bonner, who saw no particular point in advertising disgruntlement. The children ran to him and clung to his hands; young girls gave him sisterly smiles and such trifles as chicken drumsticks, pieces of cake and like tidbits. His passage to the numerous group at a square table under a big burr oak was quite an ovation—an ovation of the significance of which he was himself quite unaware.

But Jennie—the daughter of a politician and a promising one herself—Jennie sensed the fact that Jim Irwin had won something from the people of the Woodruff district in the way of deference. Still he was the gangling, Lincolnian, ill-dressed, over-stricken Jim Irwin of old, but Jennie had no longer the feeling that one's standing was somewhat compromised by association with him.

He had begun to put on something more significant than clothes, something which he had possessed all the time, but which became valid only as it was publicly apprehended. He was clearly the central figure of his group, in which she recognized the Bronsons those queer children from Tennessee, the Simmses, the Talcotts, the Hansens, the Hamms and Colonel Woodruff's hired man, Pete, whose other name is not recorded.

Jim sat down between Bettina Hansen, a flaxen-haired young Brunhilde of seventeen, and Calista Simms—Jennie saw him do it, while listening to Wilbur Smythe's account of the exacting nature of the big law practice he was building up—and would have been glad to exchange places with Bettina.

The repast drew to a close; and over by the burr oak the crowd had grown to a circle surrounding Jim Irwin.

"He seems to be making an address," said Wilbur Smythe.

"Well, Wilbur," replied the colonel, "you had the first shot at us. Suppose we move over and see what's under discussion."

As they approached the group, they heard Jim Irwin answering something which Ezra Bronson had said.

"You think so, Ezra," said he, "and it seems reasonable that big creameries like those at Omaha, Sioux City, Des Moines and the other centralizer points can make butter cheaper than we would do here—but we've the figures that show that they aren't economical."

"They can't make good butter, for one thing," said Newton Bronson cockily.

"Why can't they?" asked Olaf Hansen, the father of Bettina.

"Well," said Newton, "they have to have so much cream that they've got to ship it so far that it gets rotten on the way, and they have to renovate it with lime and other ingredients before they can churn it."

"Well," said Raymond Simms, "I reckon they sell their butter fo' all it's wuth; an' they can't get within from four to seven cents a pound as much fo' it as the farmers' creameries in Wisconsin and Minnesota get fo' theirs."

"That's a fact, Olaf," said Jim.

"How do you kids knew so darned much about it?" queried Pete.

"Huh!" sniffed Bettina. "We've been reading about it, and writing letters about it, and figuring percentages on it in school all winter. We've done arithmetic and geography and grammar and I don't know what else on it."

"Well, I'm agin' any schoolin'," said Pete, "that makes kids smarter in farmin' than their parents and their parents' hired men. Gi' me another swig o' that lemonade, Jim!"

"You see," said Jim to his audience, meanwhile pouring the lemonade, "the centralizer creamery is uneconomic in several ways. It has to pay excessive transportation charges. It has to pay excessive commissions to its cream buyers. It has to accept cream without proper inspection, and mixes the good with the bad. It makes such long shipments that the cream spoils in transit and lowers the quality of the butter. It can't make the best use of the buttermilk. All these losses and leaks the farmers have to stand. I can prove—and so can the six or eight pupils in the Woodruff school who have been working on the cream question this winter—that we could make at least six cents a pound on our butter if we had a co-operative creamery and all sent our cream to it."

"Well," said Ezra Bronson, "let's start one."

"I'll go in," said Olaf Hansen.

"Me, too," said Con Bonner.

There was a general chorus of assent. Jim had convinced his audience.

"He's got the jury," said Wilbur Smythe to Colonel Woodruff.

"Yes," said the colonel, "and right here is where he runs into danger. Can he handle the crowd when it's with him?"

"Well," said Jim, "I think we ought to organize one, but I've another proposition first. Let's get together and pool our cream. By that, I mean that we'll all sell to the same creamery, and get the best we can out of the centralizers by the co-operative method. We can save two cents a pound in that way, and we'll learn to co-operate. When we have found just how well we can hang together, we'll be able to take up the co-operative creamery, with less danger of falling apart and failing."

"Who'll handle the pool?" inquired Mr. Hansen.

"We'll handle it in the school," answered Jim.

"School's about done," objected Mr. Bronson.

"Won't the cream pool pretty near pay the expenses of running the school all summer?" asked Bonner.

"We ought to run the school plant all the time," said Jim. "It's the only way to get full value of the investment. And we've corn-club work, pig-club work, poultry work and canning-club work which make it very desirable to keep in session with only a week's vacation. If you'll add the cream pool, it will make the school the hardest working crowd in the district and doing actual farm work, too. I like Mr. Bonner's suggestion."

"Well," said Haakon Peterson, who had joined the group, "Ay tank we better have a meeting of the board and discuss it."

"Well, darn it," said Columbus Brown, "I want in on this cream pool—and I live outside the district!"

"We'll let you in, Clumb," said the colonel.

"Sure!" said Pete. "We hain't no more sense than to let any one in, Clumb. Come in, the water's fine. We ain't proud!"

"Well," said Clumb, "if this feller is goin' to do school work of this kind, I want in the district, too."

"We'll come to that one of these days," said Jim. "The district is too small."

Wilbur Smythe's car stopped at the distant gate and honked for him—a signal which broke up the party. Haakon Peterson passed the word to the colonel and Mr. Bronson for a board meeting the next evening. The picnic broke up in a dispersion of staid married couples to their homes, and young folks in top buggies to dances and displays of fireworks in the surrounding villages.

Jim walked across the fields to his home—neither old nor young, having neither sweetheart with whom to dance nor farm to demand labor in its inexorable chores. He turned after crawling through a wire fence and looked longingly at Jennie as she was suavely assisted into the car by the frock-coated lawyer.

"You saw what he did?" said the colonel interrogatively, as he and his daughter sat on the Woodruff veranda that evening. "Who taught him the supreme wisdom of holding back his troops when they grew too wild for attack?"

"He may lose them," said Jennie.

"Not so," said the colonel. "Individuals of the Brown Mouse type always succeed when they find their environment. And I believe Jim has found his."

"Well," said Jennie, "I wish his environment would find him some clothes. It's a shame the way he has to go looking. He'd be nice-appearing if he was dressed anyway."

"Oh, then you haven't heard the news," said the colonel. "Jim's going to have his first made-to-measure suit for Ames. It's all fixed."

"Who's making it?" asked Jennie.

"Gustaf Paulsen, the Dane that's just opened a shop in town."

"A Dane?" queried Jennie. "Isn't he Bettina's uncle?"

"Ratherly," said the colonel jocularly, "seeing as how Bettina's Mrs. Hansen's daughter."

Clothes are rather important, but the difference between a suit made by Atkins, the tailor, and one built by Gustaf Paulsen, the new Danish craftsman, could not be supposed to be crucially important, even when designed for a very dear friend. And Jim was scarcely that—of course not! Why, then, did the county superintendent hastily run to her room, and cry? Why did she say to herself that the Hansens were very good people, and well-to-do, and it would be a fine thing for Jim and his mother—and then cry some more?

Arc or Ox-Acetylene Welded Joints are Found in the WEIR

JOINTS welded by electricity or oxygen and acetylene gas actually fuse the two pieces of metal into one. Both of these up to date processes are used in the new factory in eliminating what has always been an objection to warm air furnaces—leaking joints.

The WEIR furnace is positively gas, dust and smoke tight and if this assurance is of the value to you that it has been to thousands of other WEIR users it should convince you that the WEIR furnace is the heating plant for you to purchase and thus avoid the discouraging possibility of ruined walls, draperies, pictures, etc.

Gases or soot simply cannot come from the WEIR as it is built today, and then pass thru the registers into the rooms and the materials in the WEIR stand up and continue to save fuel money many years after the price is forgotten.

SPOOFHOUNDS ROMP ON KING CITY, 52-0

FAIR SIZED CROWD WITNESSED GAME—M. H. S. PEP BAND.

LAFAYETTE NEXT GAME

Willoughby and Ogden Best Ground Gainers—Bush Played Excellent Game at Center.

Although late in starting the Maryville Spoofhounds when once under way crushed the King City team in a 52 to 0 fashion. A fair size crowd witnessed the game and a M. H. S. pep band furnished music at intervals during the game.

The King City game was the first conference game played by the local high school and leaves Maryville as one of the few teams in the sub-district yet undefeated. The first Maryville touchdown came in the early part of the second quarter.

At the start of the game the Spoofhounds began a steady march down the field only to lose the ball on the twenty yard line by a fumble. At intervals a Maryville man would run around the end for a ten yard stretch but the team lacked the united efforts to put the oval over the goal line. Following a good gain on forward passes Willoughby plunged over the line for the initial counter and Ogden failed to kick goal.

At this stage of the game the playing was loose on both sides and fumbles and missed tackles marred attempts at good football.

Again in the second quarter the pigskin was carried over, this time by Smith. Ogden kicked the goal making the count 13 to 0 in favor of Maryville.

In the third and fourth quarter the Maryville team was at its best, taking advantage of every break and fighting on every down. End runs with good interference enabled the team to bring the ball within striking distance of the goal and Captain Ogden raced across the barrier for the third touchdown of the game.

Quarterback Willoughby in the latter part of the quarter broke through the King City denfense for a 15 yard gain and elected to have Miller carry the ball over for the next touchdown.

Chick carried the next touchdown for Maryville just before the end of the quarter. Again Ogden failed to kick goal, the ball hitting the crossboard and bouncing back.

Murray, Aley, Godsey and Westfall were sent in by Coach Ebert to relieve some of the regulars in the next quarter.

Captain Ogden carried the last two touchdowns over. On the last touchdown he ran a 75 yard broken field run and scored.

The game was a good test game to show up any defects in the Maryville defense. Spiking was not as effective as the Spoofhounds have shown in practice scrimmage and the weak defense on end runs permitted several King City men to gain considerable ground via this route. Bush at center worked a fine defensive game. He was in every play and many times tackled the man catching the Maryville punt. On the defense he played a roving center and broke up his share of the King City areial attack in the last quarter. Ogden and Willoughby were the stellar ground gainers for the Maryville crew however, every Maryville man played good ball during the entire game.

The next Maryville game is with St. Joseph Lafayette. Lafayette has refused defeat at the hands of Savannah but the team, centered around Dick Botsford, has been playing superior football in the last few weeks and are out for blood. This will be the hardest conference game for the local high school.

The Lafayette game will be home coming day for all of the alumni members of Maryville High School. On account of this an extra large crowd is expected to attend the game which should be an incentive for the Spoofhounds to fight all the harder for the Alma Mater.

Where To Look for Style

YOU'LL have to go farther than the design of a suit for style; just as you must go farther than the shape of a violin for its worth.

A great part of style is in the fineness of materials; the expertness of workmanship.

Those things give the design its best expression and keep it that way.

Hart Schaffner & Marx style is not only a matter of design but of fine quality, too.
